

FAIRMONT TRANSFER CO. WELL EQUIPPED

A full appreciation of what present day methods are can be had by a visit to The Fairmont Transfer Co.'s fully equipped plant at 22 Jackson street, where Joe Barton, the proprietor and manager, will be found ready to take orders for hauling anything from the heaviest machinery to the lightest baggage and will give the promptest kind of service.

The company is equipped with four large trucks of from one and one-half to two and one-half tons capacity and does a big business in baggage hauling and transferring, in addition to the heavier form of hauling, such as freight and machinery. The company makes a specialty of long hauls, as far away as Washington, D. C. In the winter the company handles a large amount of coal and coke and pays especial attention to this branch of the business.

Mr. Barton, who is a native of Auburn, N. Y., bought out the business in October 1921, succeeding L. D. Snider, the present chief of police, who had long conducted the establishment. The present owner is young, active and enthusiastic and pays strict and close attention to every detail of the business, giving most particular attention to all orders received by phone, is a K. P., W. O. W., and is going to join the Business Men's Association. He employs five people besides himself and is rapidly gaining a deserved reputation for promptness, accuracy and care.

EVERY YEAR GOOD STUDEBAKER YEAR

When a group of automobile men were talking at a recent show, one of them made the remark:

"This is going to be another Studebaker year."

This is particularly true, but Leonard & Nutter of 321 Meredith street say they can't quite see the point of it. They say every year has been a Studebaker year, so far as they have been concerned, and they have been selling Studebakers in Fairmont for several years. In fact, they established their business in October, 1919, and they have been kept on the jump ever since.

Any firm which has to handle Studebaker cars exclusively for a thriving and prosperous community like that which surrounds Fairmont is bound to be kept busy, they say. He hasn't got a chance to lie down on the job. The customers would not stand for it.

D. D. Leonard and C. W. Nutter, who compose the firm, are natives of West Virginia, and very successful ones. In addition to the sales rooms, which have a floor space of 2,000 square feet, they maintain a service station next door, and, as a matter of course, have on hand at all times needed parts for the Studebaker car. They are located in a handsome two-story brick building, which has elevator services.

FAIRMONT JOBBERS GAINING PROMINENCE

Fairmont as a distributing center for a wide area of territory in northern and central West Virginia has gained increasing prominence through the operations of the wholesale house of Watkins & Thompson, known throughout this section as dealers and jobbers in hay, grain flour, and feed.

No business house in this section has wider connections, or is more substantial in its organization and its operations have grown by leaps and bounds due to the splendid quality of its stock and the accommodating service it renders customers.

The present concern with warehouses and offices at No. 206 Merchant street is the outgrowth of the brokerage firm established by E. J. Watkins and Bailey Thompson in 1911.

These two men, who have been prominent in the financial and commercial life of the city and northern West Virginia for many years, soon developed an extensive clientele, and they enlarged their operations so as to handle nothing but wholesale business.

Their warehouse on the Monongahela Railway is three stories high and is 45 by 65 feet with electric elevator and all other modern conveniences and equipment.

The firm is distributor for the celebrated Tea Table flour, and only the highest grade products are handled in any line.

The secret of the success of this firm has been its organization working in harmony with the trade and the service it has always rendered customers. It owns its own warehouse and an additional property extending from the railroad to Merchant street.

Mr. Watkins, who is president and general manager of the firm, which was incorporated some years ago, is a native of Fairmont, and although only forty-four years old has become one of Fairmont's most prominent business men. He is active in the Chamber of Commerce, and the Business Men's Association, is affiliated with athletic bodies, including the Shrine, and is an Elk.

SLACK'S PLACE A BOON TO TIRED BUSINESS MEN

The business men today who expect to maintain his pace must have recreation from his desk for no man can keep going and give his business proper attention if he keeps his nose to the grindstone constantly from morning till night. This consideration led to the establishment of the Fairmont Recreation Corporation, proprietor of Slack's Billiards at 310 Madison street, one of the most popular recreation centers in the city and a boon to the tired business man.

Fifteen well constructed tables of the most modern design afford billiard and pool games, while comfortable chairs are provided for expert, courteous attendants are constantly on hand to attend to the wants of the patrons and no service is overlooked.

One of the most popular features of the establishment is the Business Men's lunch from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m., which makes the parlors most convenient for the downtown man from the office, bank or store.

A modern soda fountain, where the choicest drinks are served, is another factor in the popularity of the establishment.

Mr. Edward Slack is general manager.

TIRE SERVICE SHOP DOES BIG BUSINESS

Everything built by man needs at times a certain amount of repairing and renewing. So, with the advent of the automobile, there came the places that make a specialty in repairing the machines.

Chief among these in Fairmont is the Economy Tire Service Shop. This plant, located at 325 Jackson street, was established as a business two years ago. It was established as a corporation July 18, 1921.

Its growth has been steady, and it now requires the active services of five employees. The plant is kept busy at all hours and is now planning an enlargement of the present facilities.

Specialties are made in Silver-ton cord, Carlisle rope cord, and Sieberling tires. The Sherman-Stevenson tires also are carried, as is a full line of accessories. With 3,000 feet of space available, assortments of all parts needed for an auto are kept on view at all times. Work is done on any make of battery, but the firm specializes in the Westinghouse. An oil station also is maintained.

A. C. Kinkead is president and also general manager. W. F. Humphreys is vice president, E. F. Kinkead being secretary treasurer.

FANCY GROCERIES AT WALTER & HYLAND

Quality goods and service with prompt delivery.

That is the secret of the success of the widely known grocery firm of Walter & Hyland at First street and Fairmont avenue, where for more than ten years the highest class foodstuffs to be found in the city are carried and where the women of the residential section find their wants filled with promptness and satisfaction.

A telephone order to either No. 1253 or No. 1254 insures groceries delivered at the doors within a few minutes after the list is received.

Everything to be found in a twentieth century grocery store is on its shelves and its stock is fresh and handled in a sanitary manner.

The members of the firm are Messrs G. A. Walter and John T. Hyland, both of whom are members of the Chamber of Commerce and are progressive business men who believe in co-operation and who are boosters for a greater Fairmont.

HARVEY SHANE HEAD OF BIG FEED FIRM

As a distributing center for a large area of territory in Northern West Virginia, the reputation of Fairmont is being greatly enhanced by the activities of the Fairmont Feed & Storage Co., which for more than a quarter of a century has been recognized as one of the most enterprising establishments in this entire section.

Owning its own six story building of brick construction at 510 Washington street, the company does an extensive business in flours, feedstuffs, stock feed, and has a large area of floor space for storage purposes. A railroad siding running alongside the warehouse gives transportation facilities and in addition the company operates an automobile truck and a team of horses.

Its leading brands are the famous Gold Coin flour manufactured by the Eagle Roller Mills at New Ulm, Minn., the Pillsbury flour, and Purina stock and poultry feeds, in addition to large quantities of feedstuffs, hays and grain.

The company has built up a considerable wholesale as well as a retail business, and has a branch in Grafton, where it also handles a complete line of staple and heavy groceries, as well as fancy articles. The firm is headed by Harvey Shane as president with G. C. Norman as general manager.
